5 A Resolution of Witness

6 SUMMARY

7 This resolution speaks to the critical need for funding for more quality affordable housing for 8 seniors, families and persons living with disabilities.

9 BIBLICAL, THEOLOGICAL AND ETHICAL RATIONALE

10 “My people will abide in a peaceful habitation,
11 in secure dwellings, and in quiet resting places.”

12 - Isaiah 32:18

13 By the grace of God, earth is our home. Yet humankind realized early in its evolution that 14 shelter from danger and the elements is essential to well-being. A home of one’s own not only 15 gives security but a sense of place, dignity and self-esteem as well.

16 Following the teachings of Jesus, we are called to love and care for one another, expressed not 17 only in words but in action. The creation and sustaining of quality affordable housing for those 18 who, for whatever reason, have limited resources, meets the biblical test of righteousness
19 illuminated in Matthew 25: 40 – response to the least of those in need. God created humankind
20 for freedom – freedom from all that afflicts the body and spirit. That most certainly includes 21 freedom from anxiety, fear, and poor health caused by a lack of quality affordable housing.

22 The creation and sustaining of quality affordable housing is also an act of hospitality. The 23 apostle Paul reminds us, “don’t neglect to show hospitality to strangers, for by doing so, some 24 people have entertained angels without knowing it.” (Hebrews 13:2; Inclusive New Testament)
25 Hospitality is part and parcel of the very life of God. God’s self-giving love calls and challenges 26 us to honor and cherish the essential “otherness of the other,” responding in love to their real 27 need. When we extend such profuse hospitality to stranger or neighbor, we reflect, however 28 ineptly and inadequately, the hospitality shown to us by God. As we respond in word and loving 29 action to the need we see, we witness to God’s generous hospitality, unconditional love and all-30 sufficient grace toward “the other” and toward ourselves.

31 Responding to the housing needs of others is not only right and just. It is inherent in our calling, 32 our vocation as Christians, to make the love of God tangibly visible in the world.

33 BACKGROUND

34 We are in the midst of an age tsunami. The senior population in the USA will double by 2030, 35 with persons 85 years and older dominant. In 1977 the US Housing and Urban Development

36 Department (HUD) provided Section 202 funding for 21,000 new apartments for persons 62 years 37 and older with no more than 50% of the area median income. Persons who qualify pay 30% of 38 their incomes, after a deduction for medical expenses, as their share of the rent. The balance is 39 made up through a subsidy to keep the community operational. The number of new units has 40 declined over the years to the point that no units were funded in 2012 and funding for 2013 is 41 questionable. Providing quality affordable housing with services for older adults is a good 42 investment because it is estimated that it costs government (us) about 30% to 35% of what it
43 would cost in a nursing home under the Medicare or Medicaid program, which is the only 44 alternative for persons who need services in this age category. AARP estimates that there are 10 45 persons on waiting lists for every unit which becomes available.

46 Quality affordable family housing has a similar crisis. One third of households are renters and 47 four out of ten pay more than 50% of their income for rent. Many are only one emergency away 48 from being homeless. There is a national gap of 5½ million quality affordable units. Currently 49 the low-income housing tax credit program is addressing some of the need for additional units, 50 but as government financial conditions deteriorate there is concern that this program might also 51 be eliminated or seriously diminished.

52 HUD has traditionally provided interest-free capital advances to nonprofit sponsors to finance
53 the development of HUD Section 811 rental housing – independent living homes, condominium 54 units and small group homes with the availability of supportive services for persons with 55 disabilities. Capital advances could finance the construction, rehabilitation, or acquisition of 56 supportive housing. Such housing is critical because the national average rent for a modestly
57 priced one-bedroom apartment is greater than the entire Supplemental Security Income (SSI) of a 58 person living with a disability. Further, a recent HUD study concluded that lower income 59 households are much more likely to include one or more members with a disability than high 60 income households. The researchers found that one-third of all households with people with 61 disabilities are single-person households and the earning potential of households, especially 62 single-person households, is limited by having a member with a disability. The need for quality, 63 affordable Section 811 housing is evident but in fiscal 2012, the capital advances program was 64 not funded.
